THE LAST SHANGRI-LA.

Our Timeless Culture

Having only opened its doors to tourism in 1974, the 'Dragon Kingdom' has remained relatively isolated from western influence. This has enabled it to maintain a culture rich in tradition, and based in its strong Buddhist heritage. It influences every aspect of Bhutanese society; from the pilgrims spinning their prayer wheels and chanting mantras to the red-robed monks performing sacred ceremonies in the monasteries. Prayer flags flutter across mountains and rivers, and chortens stand at every corner.

It boasts a great diversity of awe-inspiring landscapes of snow-clad mountains, lush valleys, dense forests and rushing streams that are considered to be the abodes of the gods. The architecture of imposing fortresses and ancient monasteries is astonishing, and wherever you go you will be greeted by friendly and traditional Bhutanese hospitality.

Our tailor-designed, private journeys will take you deep into the heart of Bhutan. We will ensure that you experience the very best the kingdom has to offer whilst not compromising on the comfort and quality of your journey.
